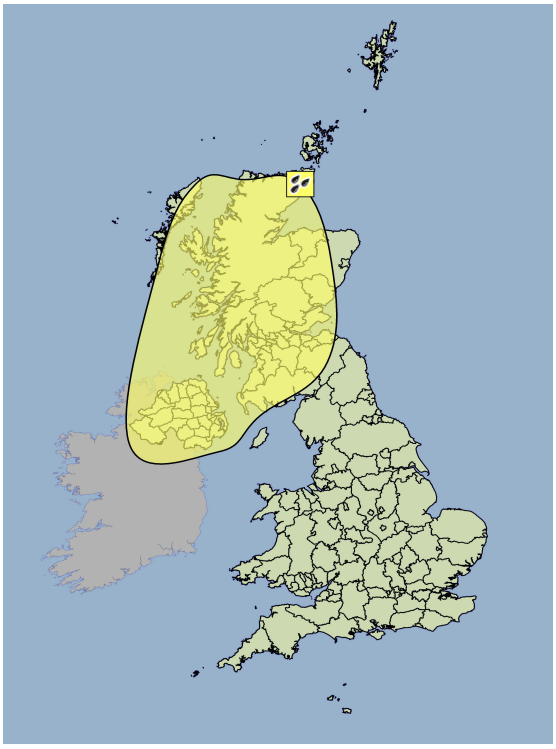
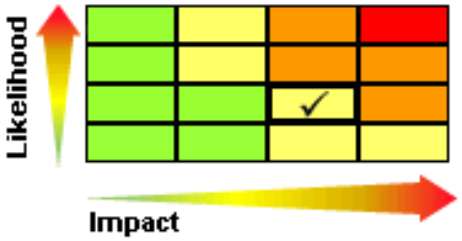
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Thursday's warm, humid and unstable airmass will persist overnight and through Friday. Some isolated heavy showers are possible right through Thursday night, but a more widespread risk of heavy downpours will develop on Friday. These are likely to be slow-moving and produce locally 20-30mm in a short space of time. However, as is often the case in this situation, some locations are likely to miss the showers altogether.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:00 on Fri, 26th Jul 2013 until 22:00 on Fri, 26th Jul 2013

A few heavy showers are expected, mainly across the south, overnight and during the early hours of Friday morning. As temperatures rise during Friday daytime the showers will become more widespread with some slow-moving thundery downpours possible. These will persist into the evening before dying away.

The public should be aware of the risk of localised disruption to travel due to surface water flooding.
